

REFLECTIONS

The space installation named "Reflections" appears at first glance chaotic and bizarre. Yet here the organising principles also apply: Yin and Yang, the double helix, the eye of the typhoon, the water's current – everything follows a spiral movement to a central point.

Like the picture of the Andromeda fog, the visitors turn in a consolidated picture and sound world, and back again into calmer structures. On the 300 surfaces of 48 crystalline polyhedrons pictures, diagrams and multimedia animations present the most diverse facets of the phenomenon crystal. At the beginning stands the conflict between humans and crystal matter. The universal fascination of crystals is dealt with through their relevance in science, mathematics and alchemy. Spirituality and the nature of crystal, and its effects, also in religion and magic, are dealt with in the centre of the installation. Finally, the entire world is reflected from different perspectives - microcosm, macrocosm and nature, which on the one hand create crystals and on the other are made of crystalline structures.
